C. Public Comment

- Alex Hatley, previous librarian with CCPL, shared that Koha can restrict by age and that library administration fears that the library board will try to become a governing board. Laura Garcia responded that the current alerts provided by Koha are not effective, which is why staff is recommending the Parent Must Be Present enhancement.
- Shawn Flanagan thinks that some books belong in the adult section, and others in the children's section. He said he does not like the lack of compromise in the latest draft of the Collection Development Policy.
- Sylvia Whitworth said she tried to read new policy, but it was boring until you got to the sexy part. She said there seems to be two groups; the professional group is boring because they just want people to read as many books as possible and the other group seems to be sexually frustrated.
- Colby Wiltse voiced support for policies that protect children from accessing potentially harmful materials.
- Juan Rodriguez shared National Institute of Health studies that connect sexually explicit material and pornography with risky sexual behavior as an adult.
- Guy Gallegos feels that those pushing the recommendations are fascists and that basic sex education should be taught to help children recognize and report sex abuse. He said the "sexually explicit" material is either for older children or not actually sexually explicit.

- Tom Tagliabue spoke after item G, the Collection Development Policy Discussion. He said he is relieved that city staff rejected some of the proposed changes and gave suggestions on some sections to keep.
- Julie Rogers spoke after item G, the Collection Development Policy Discussion. She stated the Discussion on Collection Develop Policy is the same things being repeated and she supports changes made by staff and feels the board will try to destabilize the library by not seeking more funding. She also said that people are being more rude to city staff. Pat Craig made a statement of fact that nobody is trying to destabilize the library.
- Eli McKay spoke after item G, the Collection Development Policy Discussion. She stated the new website is easier to use than the old website. She hopes the board will work on other things this year and feels that the board is being manipulated by a fascist regime.
- Vickie Natale spoke after item G, the Collection Development Policy Discussion. She stated she supports changes recommended by city staff, that the library should not interpret law, and that parents should be responsible for what their children checkout, not librarians. She said she encourages the use of the reconsideration process that is in place.
- Jazmeyne Evans spoke after item G, the Collection Development Policy Discussion. She stated some board recommendations are not necessary. She likes that staff adapted to respond to community need and wants the board to lean on library staff expertise.
- Marilena Garza spoke after item J, Future Agenda Items. She stated it is shameful that the city uses the libraries as warming/cooling centers without providing funding and that the city needs a homelessness advisory board and wants homelessness concerns and budget to be on the next agenda.
- The following citizen submitted a written public comment which is attached to the minutes: Jim Klein, Corpus Christi, TX.
