Comment

My name is Janet Newcomb, and I'm fed up. I use under 3,000 gallons a month—short showers, recycle water, ripped out my pool to save every drop in this drought. Yet my rates have increased. That's real sacrifice.

We're in Stage 3, reservoirs at 10%, emergency cuts looming—because residents like me have cut back hard. Big industry guzzles ~60% of our water—more than all households—and gets a voluntary exemption giveaway on surcharges the city never enforces.

This fee is cheap insurance for them: millions for drought-proof projects we need, but scrapping it guts revenue and slaps higher rates on low-usage families who've sacrificed plenty. Stop protecting big industry at our expense.

Don't eliminate it—fix it: Make heavy users pay mandatorily, tie exemptions to real conservation, force them to cut like us. No more shifting pain to families.

Residents bleed conservation; industry rides free. End it. Demand shared sacrifice—now—for our water survival.
