The Educational Philosophy of Fernando Fernandez Jr.

My educational philosophy is not a short-term thought creation, but rather is drawn from a lifetime of learning and encouraging others. It stems from my positive and negative experiences as a student, my training and insight as an active classroom teacher, and being a life-long advocate for the fine arts and higher education. I believe that these following things should be practiced and displayed every day within my classroom- the students will: smile, learn to achieve beyond their potential, feel safe and comfortable, leave every day with a song in their heart, have a desire to succeed, learn and improve from their mistakes, and when they graduate will support the fine arts their whole life long.

I feel that a student needs to be exposed to and learned in the core areas: reading, writing, mathematics, history, science, languages, and civics. The supplementation of the fine arts to this core area makes for a well versed and knowledgeable student and citizen. In the classroom, the use of Socratic dialogue has been time-tested and proven to be an advantageous strategy to use for the encouragement of higher level learning and thinking. The practice of intellectual and moral discipline strategies are at the heart of the fine arts classroom. Although the classroom learning intensity changes from day to day in a rehearsal setting, there is still an underlined uniformity to the class. This feeling of continuity makes the students comfortable, and also trains them for the uniformity of life in the workplace. Intelligent and frequent discussion is the key to a successful classroom as well. If the teacher does not take time to talk with their students and learn from them, then they will never learn how best to reach and teach them. Learning from our students can be the most thought provoking and humbling thing we ever do as a teacher. Always be in charge and the ultimate authority figure, but leave room for their thoughts, input, and discussion. Therefore, the school of thought I feel most comfortable aligning myself with is that of Essentialism.

I feel that the aim and purpose of schooling should be to teach our children all they will need to survive in the realities of the work place, the world of higher education, the rigors and responsibilities of family life, and most importantly respect for themselves and others. Through the academic core areas they learn all they need to not only pass the state mandated tests, but to function as a conversant citizen.

Reading, writing, mathematics, science, history, and technology applications are essential to success and for a well-rounded individual. They train and develop them into being able to serve in a job with competency, attend a higher level of schooling with a ground basis of core knowledge to draw from, and they help them to help their families. A quality education is life-long and benefits everyone whom they may come in contact with- be they friend, family, co-worker, or stranger. While the core content is important to success, the fine arts are where they learn heightened states of discipline and self-awareness, collaborative learning, fostering an appreciation and understanding for life's complexities, and a craft they can use for education, recreation and relaxation their whole life long. Through a quality fine arts education the students will learn both world and music history, foreign languages, reinforcing mathematic basics, solving higher-order thinking puzzles and instances, applications of arts in everyday life, passion for the arts, nostalgia and a sense of "home away from home", and a desire to continue a life-long track to success. Their individual or group success at contests and in concerts propels them forward and creates that desire in their hearts to continue on this track their whole life. Since the days of Plato as an educator, the inclusion of the fine arts has been considered to not only be core to creating a well-rounded citizen, but an outstanding one at that.

I believe that instruction should be delivered in a precise, concise, interesting, and enjoyable tone and manner. The student should enter the room with the desire to want to learn as much as they possibly can within the class' length. They should be encouraged and pushed a little into higher level content and repertoire in class. The material should be relevant, cross-curricular, stimulating, and presented in a logical sequence. The length of the class period should be utilized to the fullest; making sure that instruction is the primary objective and also making each minute count. The students will be actively engaged in learning or creating something for every minute they are in my classroom. I will only accept the best possible work from them and strive to encourage them to continually improve themselves. Through my continued education and development, I will show my students first hand that learning never stops and share my continued fascination with learning. The best way for me to be knowledgeable and up-to-date on current trends and issues affecting my students and my field is by committing myself to professional development sessions as they become available. I will annually attend conventions and sessions offered by Texas Music Educator's Association and Texas Choral Director's Association to keep abreast on these issues and trends. I will also actively follow and read journals in education and music education to make sure I am practicing the very best teaching I possibly can. A teacher who does not continue their learning is not only hurting themselves but ultimately their students. Only the highest quality materials and supplies should be used in the classroom; as the program budget allows. The classroom should have an active layout and design; one that is both inviting and inspires creating and learning. The ultimate goal of instruction is to model and teach; not just content, but life skills, character, success, and a love for life long learning.

I believe that in my classroom, students have a chance to voice their opinions, thoughts and questions in an environment that encourages and enlightens. They have a say in what music we program, how many performances we offer, how best to reach the community and give back, how best to assist them in learning difficult sequences, and how the music and class makes them feel or think. The students will be taught to get along with everyone, by my lead and example, and will learn a guided form of peer mediation when a problem arises. There will be no room for intolerance of others, and harmony, both in the music and in the class' relations, will be a large part of the ultimate goal for my daily classroom. There is an air of respect and courtesy in the classroom for all administrators, visitors, parents, classmates, and instructors. I, as the teacher, set the tone for their behaviors; and they will follow my lead and example when dealing with others. Every one from every background is always welcome, and made to feel especially welcome in the classroom at any time. I will never speak ill of a colleague or parent in front of any students, or others on the staff, and will treat my colleagues and parents with the same courtesy and respect I expect of them. For my parents, I will be available to them via conference period, phone, or email for their assistance or inquiry. They will be treated in a dignified manner and their issues addressed always with sensitivity, a professional tone of voice and a look of confidence- no matter how upset or hostile they may be or become. As for my colleagues, we should hold and respect the rules and standards laid out for us by both the state and the school district. Also, the less time I spend in the faculty lounge will be the best time I spend with my colleagues in conversation.

J.S. Bach once wrote, “The aim and final purpose for all music should be nothing else but the glory of God and the refreshment of the spirit.” Since I teach in a public school, it is all done for the refreshment of the spirit; and the glory of God is secretly in every individual’s heart. These are the things I believe to be essential to a quality education, and are in turn the credo for my personal education philosophy.

Why are you interested in serving on a City board, commission or committee?

I believe Corpus Christi is blessed with the capacity to be a world wide destination city. However, it takes action oriented residents to bring that capacity to fruition. Having travelled the world, I have first-hand knowledge of what attracts visitors to an area and the type of marketing it takes to create demand. I sincerely want use my knowledge and experiences to do my part for Corpus Christi.

Education, Professional and/or Community Activity (Present)

Education: I received a Ph.D. in Communication from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 2009; Master of Arts in Communication from Texas Tech University in 2006; Bachelor of Arts in Communication with a minor in Journalism from Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi in 2004. I am also a proud graduate of Roy Miller High School (Corpus Christi, TX), class of 2001. Professional Activity: I am Associate Professor of Public Relations and Internship Coordinator for the Department of Communication and Media at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi. I am the coordinator of the public relations program and, as such, I manage the recruitment, curriculum development, and assessment of the public relations minor. I also teach courses in public relations and crisis communication and advise students at the undergraduate and graduate level. I am an active researcher with over 17 publications in regional and national venues. I am also actively engaged in presenting my research at industry conferences with over 28 presentations at state, regional, and national conferences (the majority being national). I am also a regular presenter at various functions in the community having completed over 50 invited presentations. Recently and most notably, I was invited to serve as the keynote speaker at the Texas A&M University System Student Affairs Symposium (Topic: Crisis Management) where I will be speaking (on Monday, May 21, 2018) to 200 participants representing each of the TAMU system schools. In addition to my employment at TAMU-CC, I am also a crisis communication and public relations consultant and participate in both paid and pro bono projects. Community: I enjoy participating in community service. I am an active member of the Rotary Club of Southside Corpus Christi, a service organization. We regularly build wheelchair ramps for individuals in our community whom are in need, participate in the Salvation Army bell ringing program during the holidays, and sponsor the Boy Scouts of America's flag projects and Rose Shaw Elementary's Early Act First Knight education program. We also host two signature fundraisers each year to raise money for TAMU-CC student scholarships. In addition to this regular service, I have recently volunteered with the American Heart Association's "Go Red" Campaign, and Fiesta de la Flor. Additionally, in my professional life, I teach my courses using a "service learning" component. As such, I have supervised the (pro bono) development of crisis communication plans and public relations campaigns for various local profit and non-profit organizations.

Why are you interested in serving on a City board, commission or committee?

I was born and raised in Corpus Christi and I am passionate about using my knowledge and professional skills to help the city grow and prosper. It has been my personal mission to encourage my students at TAMU-CC to stay in or return to Corpus Christi and build their professional lives here. I believe that citizen participation in municipal committees is important: for one, citizens have a limited knowledge of how city projects and resources function. By becoming involved, we have the opportunity to understand the workings of the city and be more informed voters and community members. Furthermore, there is a self satisfaction that occurs when being able to share one's voice and perspectives and play a role in decision-making that impacts us. I believe that my professional knowledge of the public relations industry, combined with my passion for Corpus Christi, would allow me to be a positive participant on a City board--specifically, the Convention and Visitor's Bureau board.
